Come rain or shine, the Berard team gets it done. Rainy and muddy conditions didn't hamper the team's effort to get this massive flood gate transported to a dry dock for Bollinger shipyard. The Falgout Canal Flood Control Structure will help protect the residents of south Louisiana from possible floods that may come their way. The GIS Management team was in charge of the project together with Sea Level Construction serving as the prime contractor. Berard was chosen as the mega transport company to handle the task due to our great reputation in the area for giving our clients the best service around. Helping shipyards stay on schedule is what we do at Berard, contact us today for your next project.

On The Road The Vessel Transport

Job Specs

Berard recently transported two vessels from a Mississippi fabricator to a refinery near New Orleans, LA. With each vessel weighing over 300,000 lbs, Berard utilized their own BTI 1945 deck barge to cover most of the 500 mile journey. Using a Goldhofer PST-SLE transporter the vessels were rolled onto the barge and secured for transit. The barge traveled via inland waterways to the Berard waterfront dock near Morgan City, LA. The Goldhofer transporter was again used to offload the barge and stage the vessels on stands. A 10 axle line Faymonville DualMAX trailer was then used to transport the vessels over 90 miles to the final site.
