32 axle lines of SPMTs, 2 power packs, steel plate, loading ramps & winch trucks

We know what it takes to make load outs go smoothly. Berard has been helping oil & gas industry fabrication clients stay on schedule with prompt, dependable service for decades. When a Houston area fabricator needed this 758 ton deck loaded out, they knew from previous projects that Berard was the company for the job. The team used 32 axle lines of SPMTs to lift and transport the deck to the deck barge for loading. Ground conditions were less than desirable due to the recent heavy rains that saturated the work site. To combat this, team members laid out steel plating to better distribute the weight. The deck was then safely rolled onto the barge and sea fastened for the final journey. Thanks to our team for making it happen and working safe!

The Berard team headed out west with a sulfuric acid converter package from Holly Springs, Mississippi to Martinez, California. The cargo was split into a three piece shipment, thus making it more manageable for the over the road transport. The 2632 mile trip took 12 days and consisted of required night moves in Arizona & California as well as standby time for a snow delay. Proper planning with Berard project managers and all state agencies along the route was key to a safe and smooth transport. The team once again proved why Berard is the right choice for your over the road heavy transport needs with a another successful, on-time delivery.

Connor Angelle Administrative Assistant

Connor Angelle has been a part of the Berard team since June of 2016. She's one of our great team members in our administrative department at Berard's corporate office in New Iberia. She's a great help to the team!

Connor says "I like how there are a variety of different tasks and departments that I can help with including inventory, AP, receptionist, etc. I like how everyone is so friendly and easy going".

Connor's hobbies include visiting with her friends, shopping, traveling and dancing.
