Offshore oil & gas fabricators know Berard is the team to do the job. Berard has been helping clients keep their tight schedules on track for decades with dependable heavy transport, load-out, and offload services. The team recently transported this 365-ton offshore living quarters to the client's bulkhead for load out. At the bulkhead, the team rotated the cargo 90 degrees to position it for roll on to a 300' x 100' ocean going deck barge. It was slow and steady as the cargo made the transition onto the barge. The team rotated the cargo 90 degrees once more to final position. Congratulations go out to our team as well as the clients team for a safe load out.

Berard's experience in heavy transportation to and from the industrial areas of Louisiana's River Parishes is unmatched, certainly portrayed with this transport of a steam boiler from an industrial facility to a safe disposal site. The boiler included a sump that projected nearly 10' from the side of the main vessel, resulting in the width being over 23' wide, wider than two typical travel lanes. Using a team of spotters, civilian escorts, and police escorts, the Berard team carefully negotiated travel between utility poles and signs along the route. The load had a gross weight of 565,000 lbs., easily handled by a 16 axle Faymonville ModulMAX trailer and Kenworth C500 prime mover.
